ML-based analysis of the maturity of emerging technologies

Regarding emerging technologies, there is often discussion about their level of maturity and the likelihood that they will be implemented. Currently, this is often decided based on experts who are knowledgeable in their respective fields. However, these experts are not always independent, or they do not have all the information at their disposal.

This problem should be addressed with a ML-based analysis. By automatically collecting various sources of information (e.g. websites, scientific publications), enriched with expert knowledge and in combination with machine learning, the goal is to provide an estimate of the maturity level.

Your task and profile

- Background in data analytics and machine learning
- Study of Computer Science, business informatics, Industrial, Mechanical or Electrical Engineering or a related field of study
- Building a scoring system for emerging technologies using ML
- Implementation of a prototypical application
